WK 01.8

Posted by deplancher - 2017/09/06 20:14

DeP has read that book she got from the Free Bin at the old library. What was the title? Yappers and Yangers she thinks. Its chapters rife with run-on sentences and made up words has invited her to speak less/dance more. She hums now, the tune she made up to accompany the mean little verse set out in a fanciful font at the front of the book. Non, it's not one she made up at all. Plagiarized. Oh well. Alien Digital Dirt is free for the taking. Reach for it, mes freres et soeurs. Tomorrow it...and we...may be gone gone.]

Found an old dog and it seems to like me...doesn't matter you haven't lived in the gutter... she notices the full tumbler of amber placed on the sunny side of her desk, sips and smiles with satisfaction and half-closed lids]

I've got an alien contact. Gonna let him fly. Steve Bates, Rescue Me shook the tail of the Monkey but maybe not the whale. Terminalize me but don't bury me when I'm dead. Fred. Daid.

Hey now...isn't it far too muggy in here to struggle and fight? She looks across the room, raises the tumbler at fair Carol. Somewhere a shutter opens, closes. We hear the heaving breath of Doomey and Jesus, sniff the sweat from their collision.

Boligard's talking about skin movie girls, DePlancher. He's airing his horid views, upsetting. And he is on a roll, Frank, a blue one. Just so you know. I tried to stop him, right? But, well, doggone it, you know Boligard. We, TQR, are being broadcast across the world wide web, right? Children could well be listening. I just don't think it's cool. I think we're tempting opposition and court trials and heavy damages.

You okay? You look good. How's your cat?

have you ever heard of working for a living, you douchebag. you've got a dad, a dad high up. i do not have a dad high up, Nancy. i am trying to put together a cache of work that i can offer up for sale, okay? my shoes are bursting at the seams, sister. i've stains on my suitcoat that i cannot get out in the sink in my apartment. i've bets lost, and i've accounts at the liquor store around the corner that must be fed, savvy? i need Pez. i need amber. do you think i pull these things from low hanging tree branches? you are pissing me off. i need to work, and here you are whining to DeP about indecency? you are less of a man than i thought you were. what about these ladies that work hard and aren't awarded for it? what about Dillon Harper and Asa Akira? you ever heard the name Mia Malkova? Or Lil' Caprice? Heard of Meagan

Rain? No you haven't. You know of the starlets, those ladies on the silver screen making tiring work of an age old profession that no true man or woman cares truly about. you ever heard mention of a lady named Skin Diamond? Eufrat? Did you know one of the coolest ladies on the planet, one we can all cuddle up close to and melt, has multiple profiles on facebook, and just maybe she needs a friend because just maybe she doesn't have the topmost self-respect like most of you religious gods. That'd be Cassie Laine. And what about Janice Griffith? She's an angel, cousin.

you think of yourself and your worldview. we are friends, you bastard. but if you cut off these ladies from view, from recognition, from me shouting out their names and bowing and thanking God for them, then fuck you.

DeP's in the corner sitting at her desk gazing up at the mirrorball as though watching some faded hallucinations or just thinking. She's finished reading Monica Strina's Walls and Strangers. She picks up the cap. It's heavy like granite but light, too, like flower petals. An examiner feels good after some goodstuff crosses her desk. She might get to contemplating. Learn something about something or just imagine possibilities.]

I believe that also. I do. Call it foolish but yeah mais oui...I believe in the kindness of strangers. She turns to the occupants of the room. There are double what once was and that brings variety. A certain beat. A renewed rhythm to the cracked paint in these walls.]

Don't you?

I like this latest cap. Like its poetry...well, I like poetry. Sssshhh. Let Monica Strina's Walls and Strangers through the chute. To the Terminal, let it rise!

She flicks her fingers in circles and twiddles making like some mystic. Presses 'send' and the deed is done.]

Carol...who plays that song American Jesus? I hear it in my sleep. I hear it all day long.

DeP studies the Jesus and his dance moves. Who could not move, with the walls shaking and Carol's spurs a jingle jangling in the mist? She shimmies a little, but really it's no more than a readjustment of position. She isn't in the mood to dance now. She is in the mood to brood a little. All she can hear is Tom Petty's I Need to Know and All You Can Carry and a bunch of melodic tunes in between. Stuff like that. She shakes her head here though, adjusts her hair and examines her cuticles like maybe they need oiling. Something's got to give. Carry on, some lame voice urges. So she does. She clears her throat, closes her eyes and mind to the morose. Death sucks. But the stomping boot rolls on...]

I feel like I'm dragging one leg behind. You two and Dooms, man. You're much more efficient at this examination process than I. Not that I'm completely lame. Was that me whining just now, looking for sympathy.. Accchhhh and merde. If I were a spitter, I might spit now, that seeming an appropriate gesture and expulsion or means of emphasis. Ahem...oui, Mille Carol, I dig those spurs. We should take a stroll sometime with or without our horses.

So, insomnia is the partial cause of visions Je pense. I don't want to talk about it though. I'll sleep in another galaxy. I just read this strange little number...oops, apologies...piece of cap. It didn't help with sleep, the content being odd and slightly..er, well. It was vivid and strange. So, blah blah. I do need rest. But here, can we send it by pigeon? Motorbikette by VC Nelson Stanley has been zinged to the Terminal.

So, anyway, before you go all into Low Tide and shit, I'd like to shove John Buckley's The Language of Ghosts up past the mirrorball, and past the rafters hung with cobwebs, and through the second floor squeeking flooring, into the Terminal, where they feast on roast.

Good fucking job, Buckley. You're in the VIP room, bitch!

DeP's been sick. It's unusual, this altered state. With fragility she is familiar but not the weakness fever and flush bring on...ugh. She checks the corners of the room, peeling back the wallpaper wherever pieces of it hang loose. Checking for mold. What else, besides some foreign debris, some organic filth could have infected her otherwise balanced and healthful state of being. There is, she thinks, too much weakness in the world. Too much mediocrity and self abuse. Delusion of what it is to be...she turns her attention to the mirrorball and its perpetual counterclockwise orbit.]

I'm grateful for VCs who deliver capital of substance. Helps me focus on the possibility of possibilities. That there are some, I mean.

Careful with that axe, Jesus!

Oh, oui. I feel much better except for the periodic hallucinations. Anyway, there's been some worthy capital trickling in...worthy. Huh. As if we're the gods of what is and what is not so. But I guess in this comic book seam we get to take the role. And in that superior role of idiotic superiority I'm feeling right now, I can say that I did read and fall into VC Tom Sheehan's Improper Burial at America's First Ironworks and now that I've dug myself out of said capital deem it launchable into the vast field of uncompromising knowledge and judgment known as The Terminal.

Bite of this, ye dogs of wit and lit and see if ye deem it fit.

And now, ssshhh. DeP wants nothing better than a nap with her cat in her swinging hammock under the moon.
